

Abstract of the Invention

The specification describes techniques for isolating noisy subcircuits in integrated analog/digital devices. Isolation is obtained using a modification of triple well isolation wherein the deep isolation implant is restricted to the digital 5 circuits only to prevent noise from the digital circuits from propagating to the analog sections through the buried implant. Resistor sections are also separated from the buried isolation implant.